Before Esola's trial started, he with the seven other indicted officers appeared before Superior Judge Lawfor to answer to a charge of conspiracy to obstruct Justice. Attorney Thomas O'Connor asked for dismissal of the complaints, basing his motion on the ground that the indictments do not give a specific offense, but that, contrary to law, set forth five different kinds of conspiracy. Judge Lawler set the ease over to under a promise of marriage. Thursday, when arguments on O'Conner's motion will be heard.

REV. JOHN GREER DIES AT 104 YEARS

COMMUNICATION.

In the Tribune of Saturday I read to state my position as to leaving tions. Medford. I came here over three years ago with the idea of making this my permanent home for these reasons, namely that Medford and Jackson county offered the best prospects for the future than any other place it had been my pleasure to visit city at present. or live in. I was born in Iowa and have lived in the following states, have visited most every other state Southern Oregon and Medford in particular suit me the best of all for ture as being very bright from every point of view. I doubt if any one here has had in the same length of time as much to contend with from a financial standpoint and personal losses yet I still have unbounded faith in Medford and think that if our people will only exercise a little talk and think about all the advantages of this particular valley that we can build a city here that will be one that all who come here will be glad that they chose Medford for their place of residence and the place to invest their money in.

Therefore for myself I wish to state most emphatically that I intend to stay right here if I can arrange my business matters in a satisfactory manner to enable me to continue to live here for years to come.
